Maddening Euphoria is an addictive and fun arcade game with randomly generated level design and gameplay. You control Mason and Millicent Zane as they run and jump, avoiding falling hazards and speed-reducing pools of thick goo. Collect diamonds and don fedoras to activate powerups and receive a short, colourful Second Wind speed boost. Jump on and off rocks to ascend and descend cliffs. Avoid the inevitability of the carapace wall by coming within spitting distance of it. Reach it to receive a short, colourful Second Wind speed boost. If you get too close to the wall, you die. If you reach the wall too fast, the game ends. Or you could do some of the 150+ challenges ranging anywhere from trivially easy to borderline unfathomable. There's also about a third of a game that you can't know about until you get to certain points. Maddening Euphoria is also available on Steam.

A string of hunger strikers have given up their protest at the Pat Hoban Centre in Leeds. West Yorkshire Police said it had stopped using force against the protestors and had arranged for social services to check on them and make sure they had food and drink. The UK government and organisations, including Amnesty International and UNISON, have welcomed the move but remain deeply concerned by the length of the protests. "The West Yorkshire Police service said the strikers surrendered peacefully and will be supported through the domestic response process," a spokesperson said. "There have been no arrests or charges relating to this matter." A team of medics attended the hospital this evening to support the strikers. "We have seen hunger strikes continue longer than necessary in many cases, with very real health risks," Trevor MacNamara, head of the Bradford and Hunslet-based Prisoners' Support Group, said. Protest group O2_UK, which campaigns for the right to prisoners access to telephones, noted the "timing of this gesture heralds the resumption of industrial action by prison guards, with the latest action being a four day 'cell-block door-to-door' strike in the Hertfordshire prison estate". A bird landing on a tree branch, maybe, or a fox rustling through the leaf litter. He rolled over and waited. Over a minute passed. The only sounds were the rustling leaves, a low-level wind blowing through them, and the occasional rush of a breeze through branches above. He shook his head at himself. He was still in shock. ===== 2017 NFL Playoff Predictions & 2018 Fantasy Football Sleepers While we all know our preferences in the NFL Playoffs, most of us will be starting a fantasy football roster for the first time. Often you will be anxious to jump into a fantasy football draft with your friends, but you need to have some understanding before you start. You don't want to draft a player and find that they were injured or that they were traded. Not to mention that the NFL Playoffs are unpredictable and changes can happen at any time. In order to land your fantasy football draft success, you need to make a wise decision about who to draft. You don't want to select too early in a draft and end up with a starter that won't start or is hurt. Of course, you want to avoid the last rounds of the draft where you draft a player that you feel is going to be cut. So make sure you really understand the NFL playoffs. These picks are based on my NFL playoffs preferences. These are the players that I'll start and I wouldn't consider leaving them out. In fact, here are my top ten NFL Playoff predictions. 1. Tennessee Titans 2. Seattle Seahawks 3. New England Patriots 4
