Every once in a while I'll get an email from a customer who is very reluctant to buy the game simply because of its 3.5 theme. From an players perspective, 3.5 theme can be a bit much, as it's essentially a resurrected version of AD&D 1e. When you have a system that was running for nearly 30 years, it'd be easy to get caught up in nostalgia. Additionally, we see quite a few groups that don't want to play 4e because they think it's not what they want. So, I know many players will say "Why do I have to play this when I could be doing whatever I want?". And I'd reply,

"Well, you're playing a game that was made by a dev team that wanted to play their system". However, there are reasons why some of us went back to the game (and had high hopes that the team had improved their game). So, I'll talk about the product, and show you why you might want to play it regardless of what system you want to play. The Game The Neverwinter Nights 1e - Enhanced Edition is a product that's been in the works for a long time. Originally announced in 2006, the game was made for D&D 3.5, with a few items ported from the Neverwinter Nights 2e. The actual product has gone through a lot of change though. After several delays, we started seeing some official footage. And a few months later (between July and November of 2009), one of the main developers uploaded a website showing their plans for the game. Later, Neverwinter Nights 1e - Enhanced Edition was delayed again. And in mid-April 2010, the team uploaded a video that showed off the game. And fans could play it. In 2011, the team released a new update showing that they had fixed a few game-breaking bugs. And they also released c9d1549cdd

1. Choose a character (one of the 19 original contestants from the US version) to work as that person's "anchor" for a limited time period (1 game play for 3 characters) 2. When your character is "anchored" (ie: on a question) they can now be "guided" and can be guided to a set of clues for the specific character by using the "Which is the one?" game mechanic. 3. That same player can then pick another character to be "anchored" if they choose to do so. 4. During "anchoring" time, other clues will be laid out, and you can get double clues. 5. "Guidance" will end as soon as the player has found a value. 6. Values found during "guidance" can be used to open up optional "Hints". If you open a hint from an individual character, they can then earn their own set of additional clues. 7. Values found during "guidance" can also lead to a "Chance Card" that can be used to change clues or open up new paths to the value. 8. If you have an optional "Multiples" clue, you can earn that clue without guidance, using the "Multiples" clue path. 9. If you choose to "Challenge" a clue, it will be played out in front of you and you will need to find a value in a 2-minute time-limit. You can earn all double clues, and use them to open up additional clues. 10. You cannot "Challenge" from an optional clue. You must find an additional clue before "Challenging" that clue. 11. "Challenge" clues are on a 1-week timer, to account for traveling time during the US version. 12. You can get one set of multiples clues before "Challenge" by finding a dual clue and opening up that clue path, or by finding an open clue and double-cluing. 13. You can earn multiple double clues before "Challenge" by opening up all open clues, or you can get single-clues and double them by double-cluing. 14. You can go back and get more multiples clues after a "Challenge" by finding a multiple on the first turn. 15. Double-clues will only take you one-week toward a challenge. Multiples clues can only be used toward

URES AAND SCINTILLATION IN THE DUAL FLUID CLC FOR ELECTRONIC AND OPTICAL DEVICES. Gerald T. Chen, 1 Tan-Nong

Yu 2 A. K. Ghosh 1, and Jyothy Philip1. INTRODUCTION Recently, there is a strong interest in developing optoelectronic and electromechanical devices operating in the visible and infrared region of the electromagnetic spectrum. While the optical process has been well understood and other fundamental layers, such as epitaxy, thin films, or surface modifications, have been perfected, the fabrication of electromechanical or electronic devices is rather inadequate. There is a strong desire to not only make these devices optical, but to make them small in size, in order to shrink the whole structure. In the present work, Nb, TiO_2, and SiO_2 NP films have been deposited on Si substrate for a typical optical and electronic dual-fluid CeCe(rO2-)/DCE (di-methyl carbonate) CLC structure. X-ray diffraction, Focused Ion Beam (FIB), and Transmission Electron Microscopy (TEM) were used to study the structural properties as well as the microstructure of the films. Temperature dependent dielectric properties have been measured with a high-frequency impedance analyzer at regular intervals. The decrease in observed dielectric constant value has been confirmed with the increase in RT temperature. The high-frequency conductivity increases at RT is noted to decrease at low RT temperature, while the value is found to be constant up to 1000 K.AIT/dimethyl carbonate/Ce(NO3)2. The CLC nano-devices showed significant scatter-free refractive index modulation of nearly 102 in the visible range (400-700 nm). The cell corresponding to visible wavelength range (365-700 nm) gives strong transmission peak through a 0.42 μm thick LC layer. Optimization of the device response is demonstrated at both RT and low temperature.Read More : For my $8.39 monthly salary, I know I shouldn't -- by phone for 5 minutes, for 48 cents each minutes. Description In the year 2019, an organization called Deep Spectrum Projects takes it upon itself to travel through time to change the course of human history. Specifically, they travel to the year 1944 to protect Michael Lincoln, a researcher who is thought to be on the verge of discovering a potentially world-changing innovation. Due to their mission, Deep Spectrum Projects leaves the year 2019 with no way of returning, making time travel not only their duty but their identity. The people of Japan became the new masters of the world following WW2, but they faced another, even darker and more sinister enemy. Deep Spectrum Projects managed to escape from that time period, but only with the help of a time travel device. Once it was handed over to a Japanese scientist, Deep Spectrum Projects had vanished into time, only to be saved by Michael Lincoln and his trusty partner, Ada. The story begins as Michael and Ada return to present time. Michael's father had kidnapped and brought his son to space, so he could investigate the crystal that produces time travel technology and the time travel device. But in order to bring back the device to the Space Agency, Michael's father must be destroyed. Fortunately, by the time
