A: I've had the same problem with Ubuntu 18.04 LTS; I was able to solve it by following these directions: Open the file manager and select the Preferences menu Open it again Select the Security tab Click on the Change Permissions button After that it will ask you to give permissions for cd. Click on OK Exit the file manager. Open a terminal and type: cd ~/Downloads/ It should say permission denied. Then type: sudo cd ~/Downloads/ It should now be able to view the files you wanted to read. Nvidia puts paid to MacBook Pro's T2L architecture - gmys ===== magicalhippo T2L means it has "2 levels of L1 cache". The article claims this is "designed to allow different types of work from different applications to be sped up by the L1 cache". It turns out however that that is true only for the smaller L1 caches, but not the L3 cache. You can see this in section 6 of the architecture document [1] (pages 50-53).
