Also . of the post-ECT element of duress, the conduct of Hernández' co-counsel, the initial errors of the prosecution, and the sentencing judge's alleged mistakes. These errors do not evidence prosecutorial bad faith, however. The critical omission is the failure to inform the court of the recantation until after the defendant had pleaded guilty. The district court found that both defense counsel and the prosecutor knew of the recantation of some of his former testimony but neglected to inform the court. While this is a matter of defense counsel's professional performance, it is immaterial. Peguero-Galán, 733 F.2d at 61. 15 There is no duty to act. An isolated and unknowing breach of duty is not sufficient to raise a constitutional issue. If the earlier testimony is so "material as to be a part of the basis for the sentence imposed," that is sufficient. Rios-Ortiz, 830 F.2d at 1060. The alleged perjury at the plea hearing, by itself, is insufficient to show a constitutional violation. See DelValle v. Armstrong, 679 F.2d 896, 898 (10th Cir.1982) (perjury which induced the defendant to plead guilty to manslaughter was not a deprivation of due process 6d1f23a050
